Wet Wet Wet A FABULOUS '92!

1992 has been a fabulous year for the Wets.

They celebrated the New Year with a number one album High On The Happy Side and simultaneously a number one single - Goodnight Girl. This high flying start was a measure of what was to come during the rest of the year 1992 also saw the release of not one but two Wet Wet Wet videos! The first was High On The Happy Side Video So Far. The Wets had yet another smash hit on their hands, doubly so since the video reached number one in both the video and general video charts. What does that say about you, the fantastic fans who put it in that unique position?

The second video is called The Wets At The Castle, recorded live during the very special gig at Edinburgh Castle. Wet Wet Wet had earned themselves the privilege of not only playing on the esplanade of the capital's most important historical monument, but also that of bringing to a close the world famous Edinburgh Festival (there is a full review of the gig in this edition of SPLASH).

1992 has also been a phenomenal success for the band in terms of touring. The year started with the Wets playing tour dates all over the country as they set off on their High On The Happy Side tour. In addition, the Birmingham NEC concert was televised and shown on BBC1 in April. This was followed in the summer by the Lip Service tour, which came after the release of the Lip Service EP. This particular tour finished with a date at the Belga Beach Festival in Belgium.

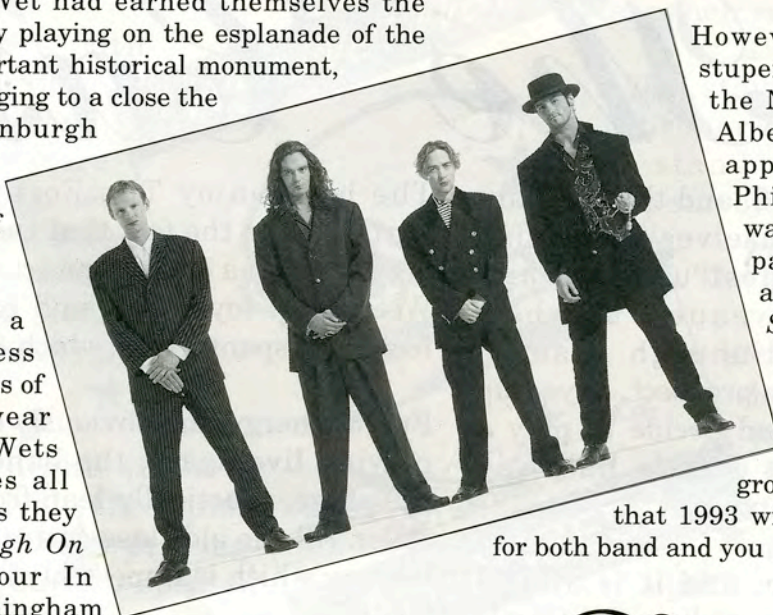

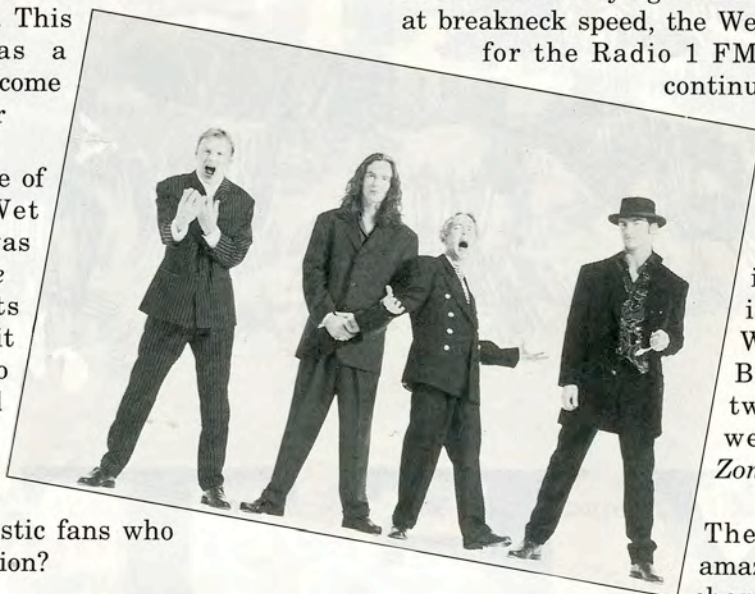

Just in case the band were not working hard enough during this period, a fabulous free gig was organised as part of the celebrations taking place at the Arran Free Festival. Flying back from the Manchester GMex at breakneck speed, the Wets joined Jakki Brambles for the Radio 1 FM Roadshow. They then continued by performing a full-length gig, which thousands of loyal fans had flocked to see. Arran had never witnessed anything like it, as the island was invaded by the Wet Wet Wet army! It also meant BBC appearance number two for the band as they were featured on the O-Zone.

The gigs also raised an amazing £11,500 for the Wets' charities, Childline, Shelter and the Great Ormond Street Hospital. Well done everybody - keep up the good work!

However, the highlight of this stupendous year must have been the November gig at the Royal Albert Hall, when the band appeared with the Wren Philharmonic Orchestra. This was the gig of a lifetime for the participants and the ecstatic audience. Look out for SPLASH 15 for a full concert report, including exclusive photographs!

So that was 1992 for the group Wet Wet Wet. Let's hope that 1993 will be every bit as rewarding for both band and you - the fabulous fans!

WETS

At The Castle

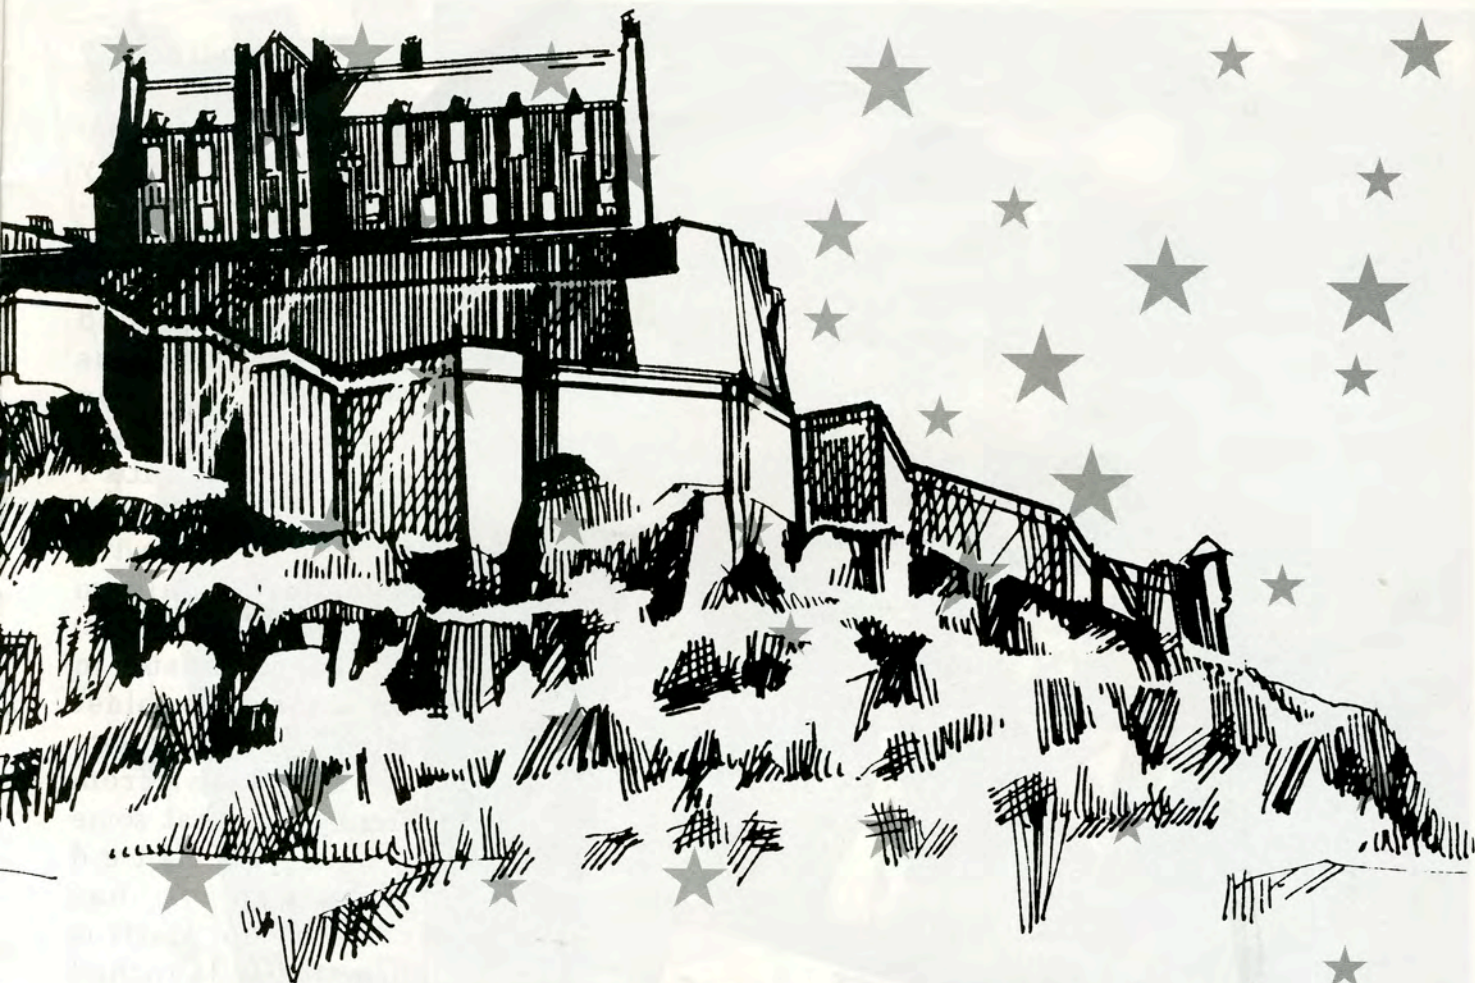

September, 1992, and the Wets are gearing themselves up to play one of the most unusual and illustrious venues of their careers, Edinburgh Castle. Excited by the prospect, keyed up and raring to go, the band decide to play a warm up gig at a point exactly half way between Glasgow and Edinburgh.

They choose Livingston, and it is at The Forum, on the evening preceding the Castle show that the band play a really scorching set for the wall to wall fans, surprised and delighted by this eleventh hour extra.

The boys enjoy The Forum enormously, partly due to the fact that the intimacy of the gig produces a closer contact with some of the Wets' most loyal fans and partly due to the feeling of spontaneity which the gig produces.

Full of energy and obviously over the moon at playing live again, the band bound around the stage, practically leap-frogging over each other. All the old classics are delivered with a fervour which is impossibly infectious.

And as the crowd raise their voices to join in with Goodnight Girl, they know that the greatest treat of all is yet to come, tomorrow at the magnificent Edinburgh Castle.

The Castle stands proud and unbowed, dominating the city's skyline. For eight centuries this stately monument has repelled relentless attacks from many and varied an enemy.

However on 5th September, 1992, those ancient foundations were severely rocked by a new and powerful force. Enter Wet Wet Wet, modern musical warriors, prepared not to do battle, but to thrill, amaze and stun.

It is the last night of the Edinburgh Festival. The band and entourage are all praying that it will not rain. An open-air concert within the ramparts of Edinburgh Castle is indeed a hugely ambitious project - but nothing that the boys can't handle. Only...just please don't let the elements take the band's name too literally!

As darkness falls, people make their way up the steep cobbled street to the Castle. In almost reverential silence, they take their seats.

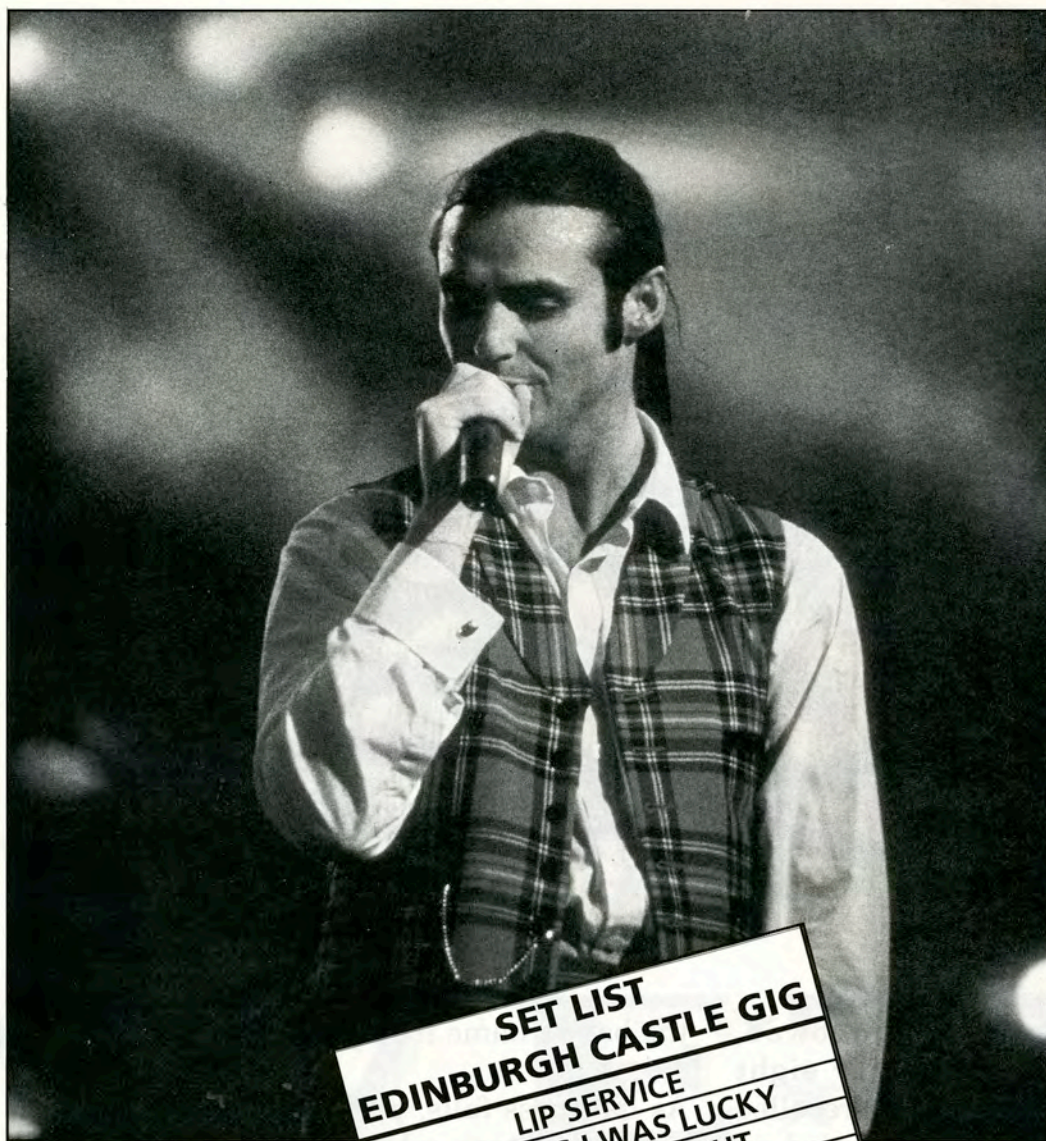

The stage is set and the Castle proper, floodlit and beautiful, stands behind, suspiciously surveying all below.

The pre-concert hush comes as a complete surprise. Usually people are shuffling around, shouting and thumping feet in anticipation. Not so tonight. We lift our eyes over the darkened stage and it is such a wonderful sight.

The stars perform their own light show, as if smiling secretly to themselves in a premonition of what is to come.

Then, in a great burst of sound and light, Wet Wet Wet materialise, brilliant green and blue lasers shooting out to meet the stars as the boys launch into Lip Service. The sharp air is doing something magnificent to the sound, producing a sweet clarity as nature and modern technology hold hands.

The band look as if they have been working out and on a super-healthy diet for a year. Marti, truly patriotic, wears a rather splendid tartan suit and the whole band is leaping around as if the natural static in the air has gone to their feet!

GOODNIGHT GIRL

It is incredibly difficult to describe the effects of the lightshow so many beautiful, mind-shattering colours and pulses shooting into the star-spangled night sky. There is also a soothing subtlety; and, as the band launch into I Can Give You Everything (from the legendary album Popped In Souled Out) all this culminates in an enormous blast from a mega thunderflash from front stage that some over-excited technician has conjured up. Marti is practically launched into orbit, and the people in the first seven rows are temporarily hypnotised. Graeme, bass, collapses in hysterics (bless him - what a warped sense of humour) and it all goes to enhance the joy and excitement of the evening.

Graeme Clark once again proves his talent as a singer as he takes over the mic for Walking In Memphis, the Marc Cohn hit - except tonight we're walking in Scotland. Graeme Duffin helps out with his stunning, soulful vocals to make the song one of the Highlights of the evening.

Something about the sound of Neil's keyboards marries perfectly with the

So let's all sing along, then. The Castle looks down, its weathered walls forever imprinted with a thousand voices singing about a wishing well, and a million colours penetrating its historic stone.

It has been sheer magic And as many, many happy people file out down the cobbled streets, back at the Castle the ghost of the lone piper decides to take the night off.

ethereal night, almost as if it sends signals to any extra-terrestrial which might be out for the night. Is anybody out there? You bet there is!

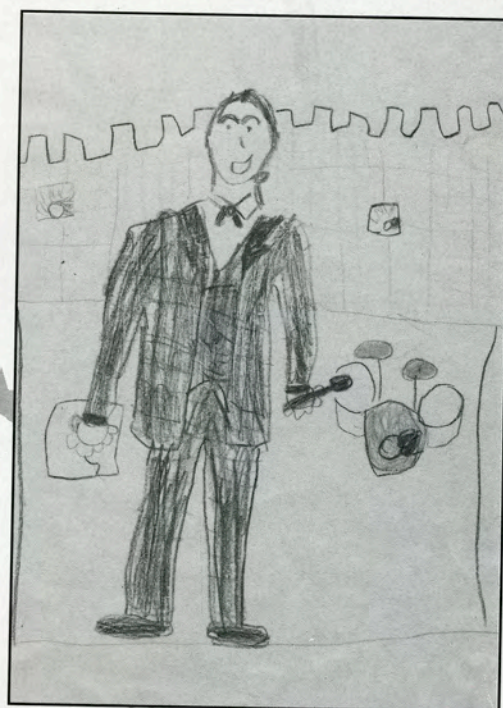

Marti is back, observing "Perhaps the applause was a bit enthusiastic??" No problems there, though.

Our singer has discarded the tartan and, resplendent in a grey suit with black velvet trim, gives us a breathtaking rendition of Brand New Sunshine which has most of the audience swooning into ecstatic heaps.

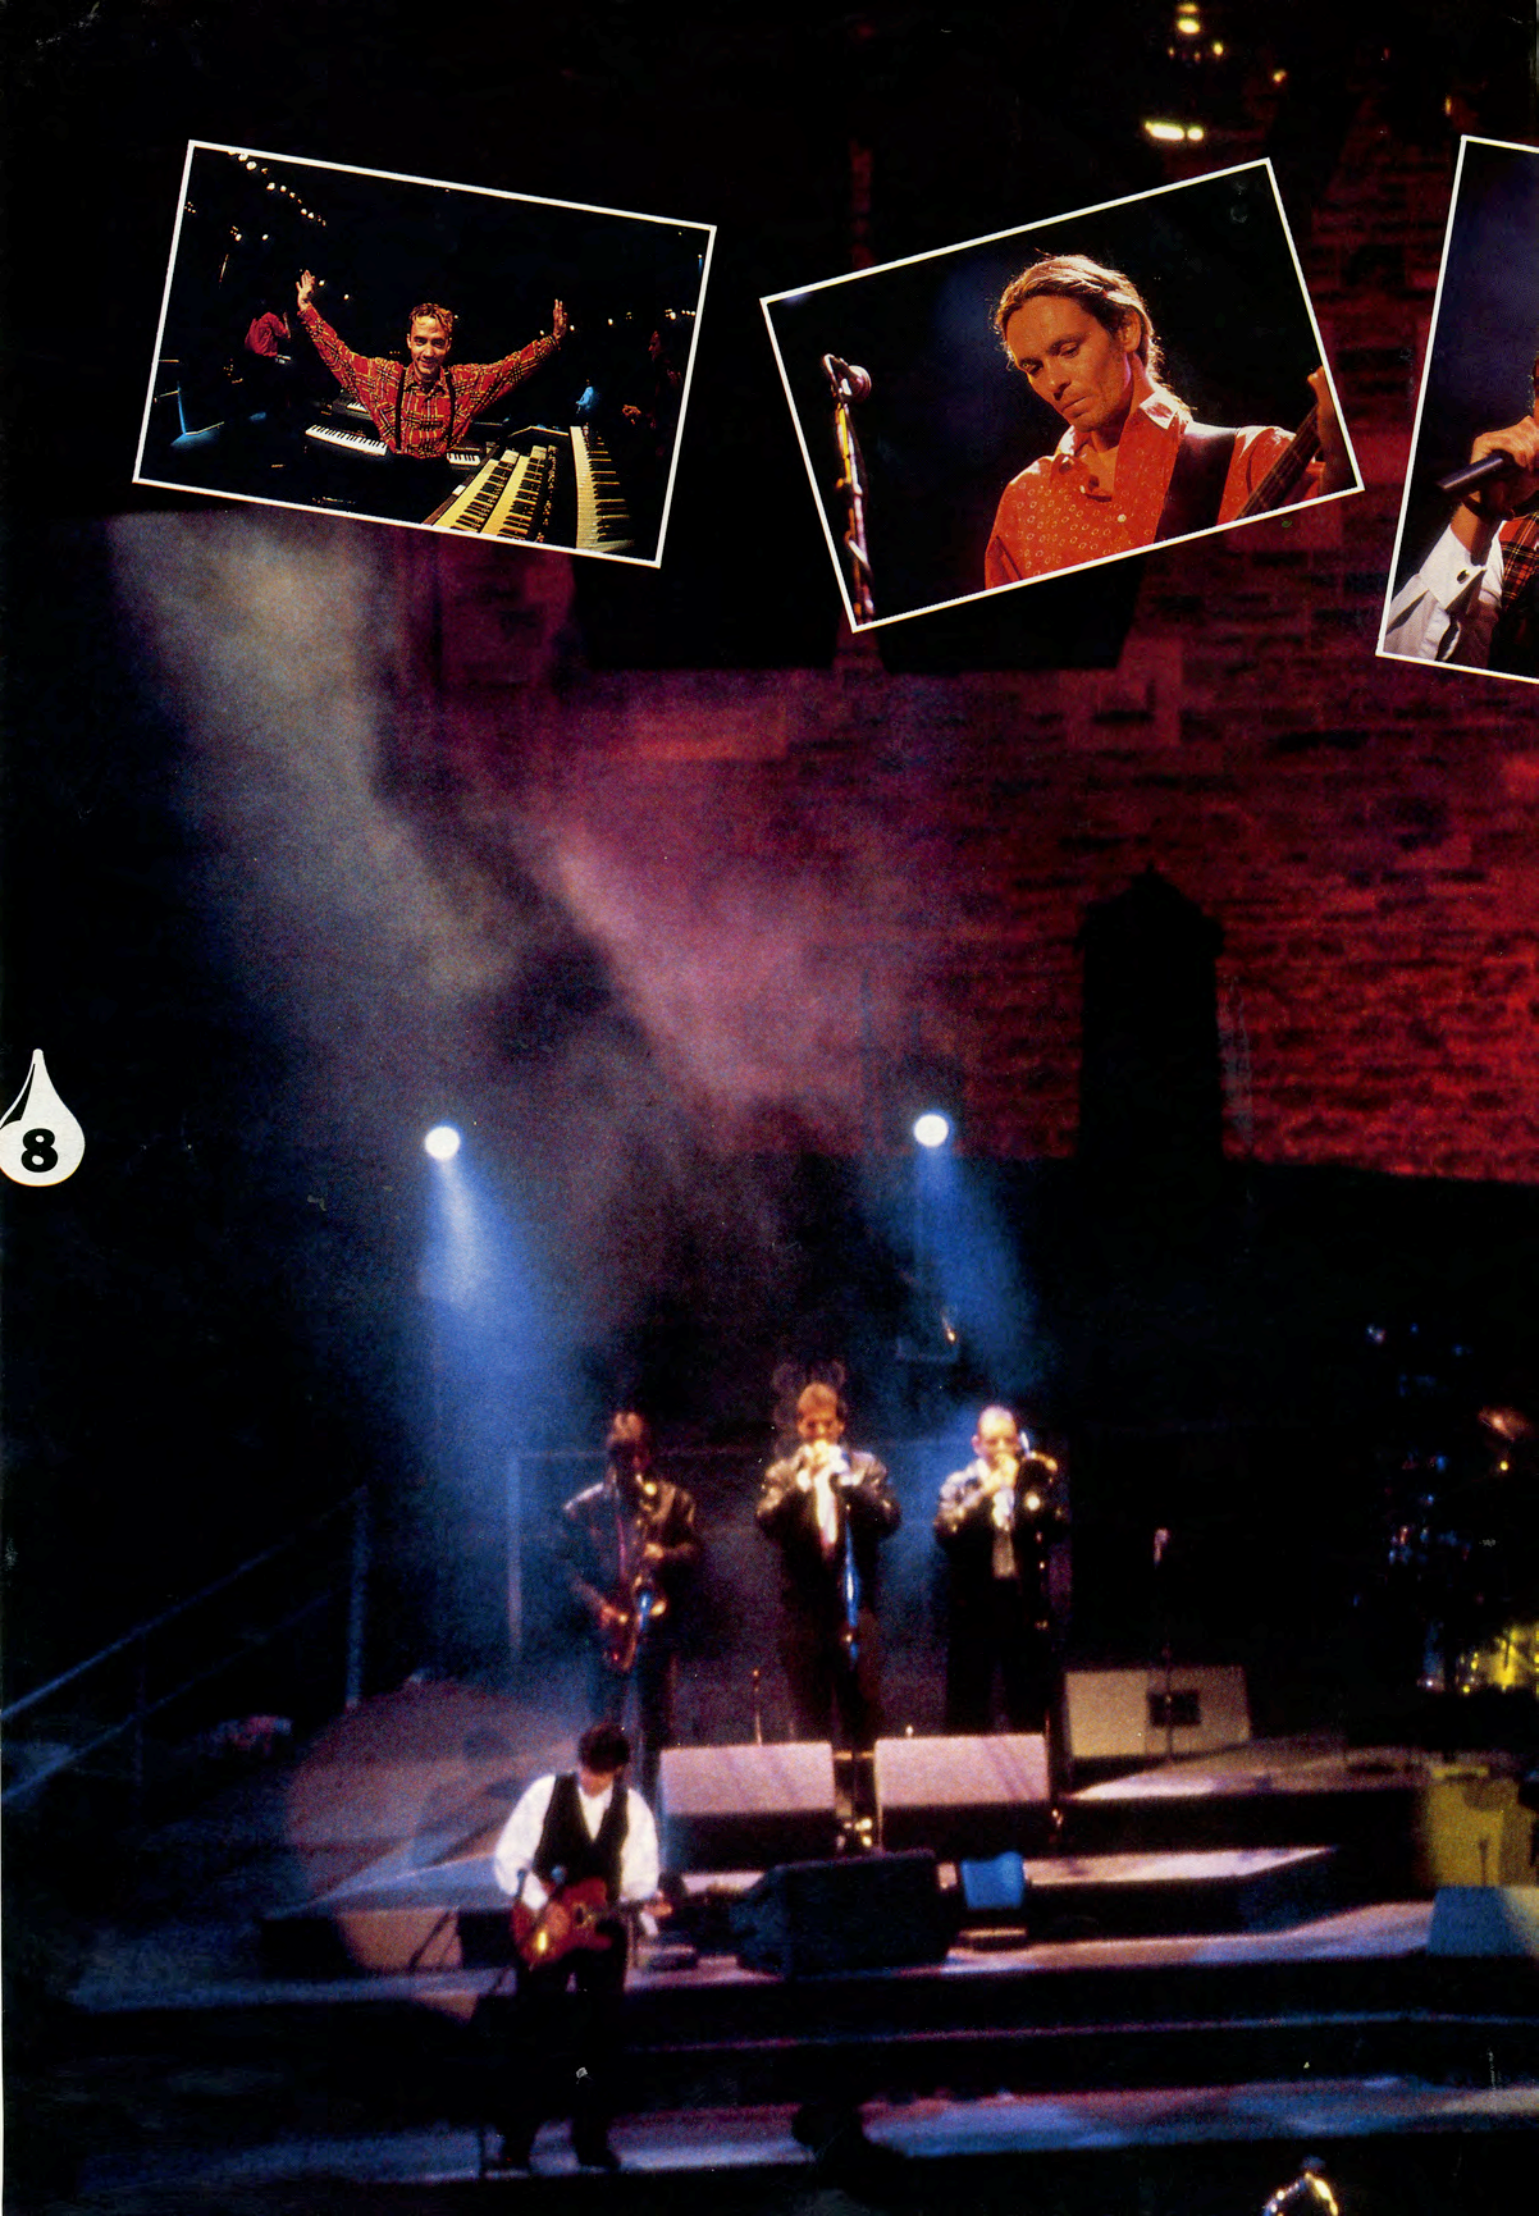

Please don't let this ever end!

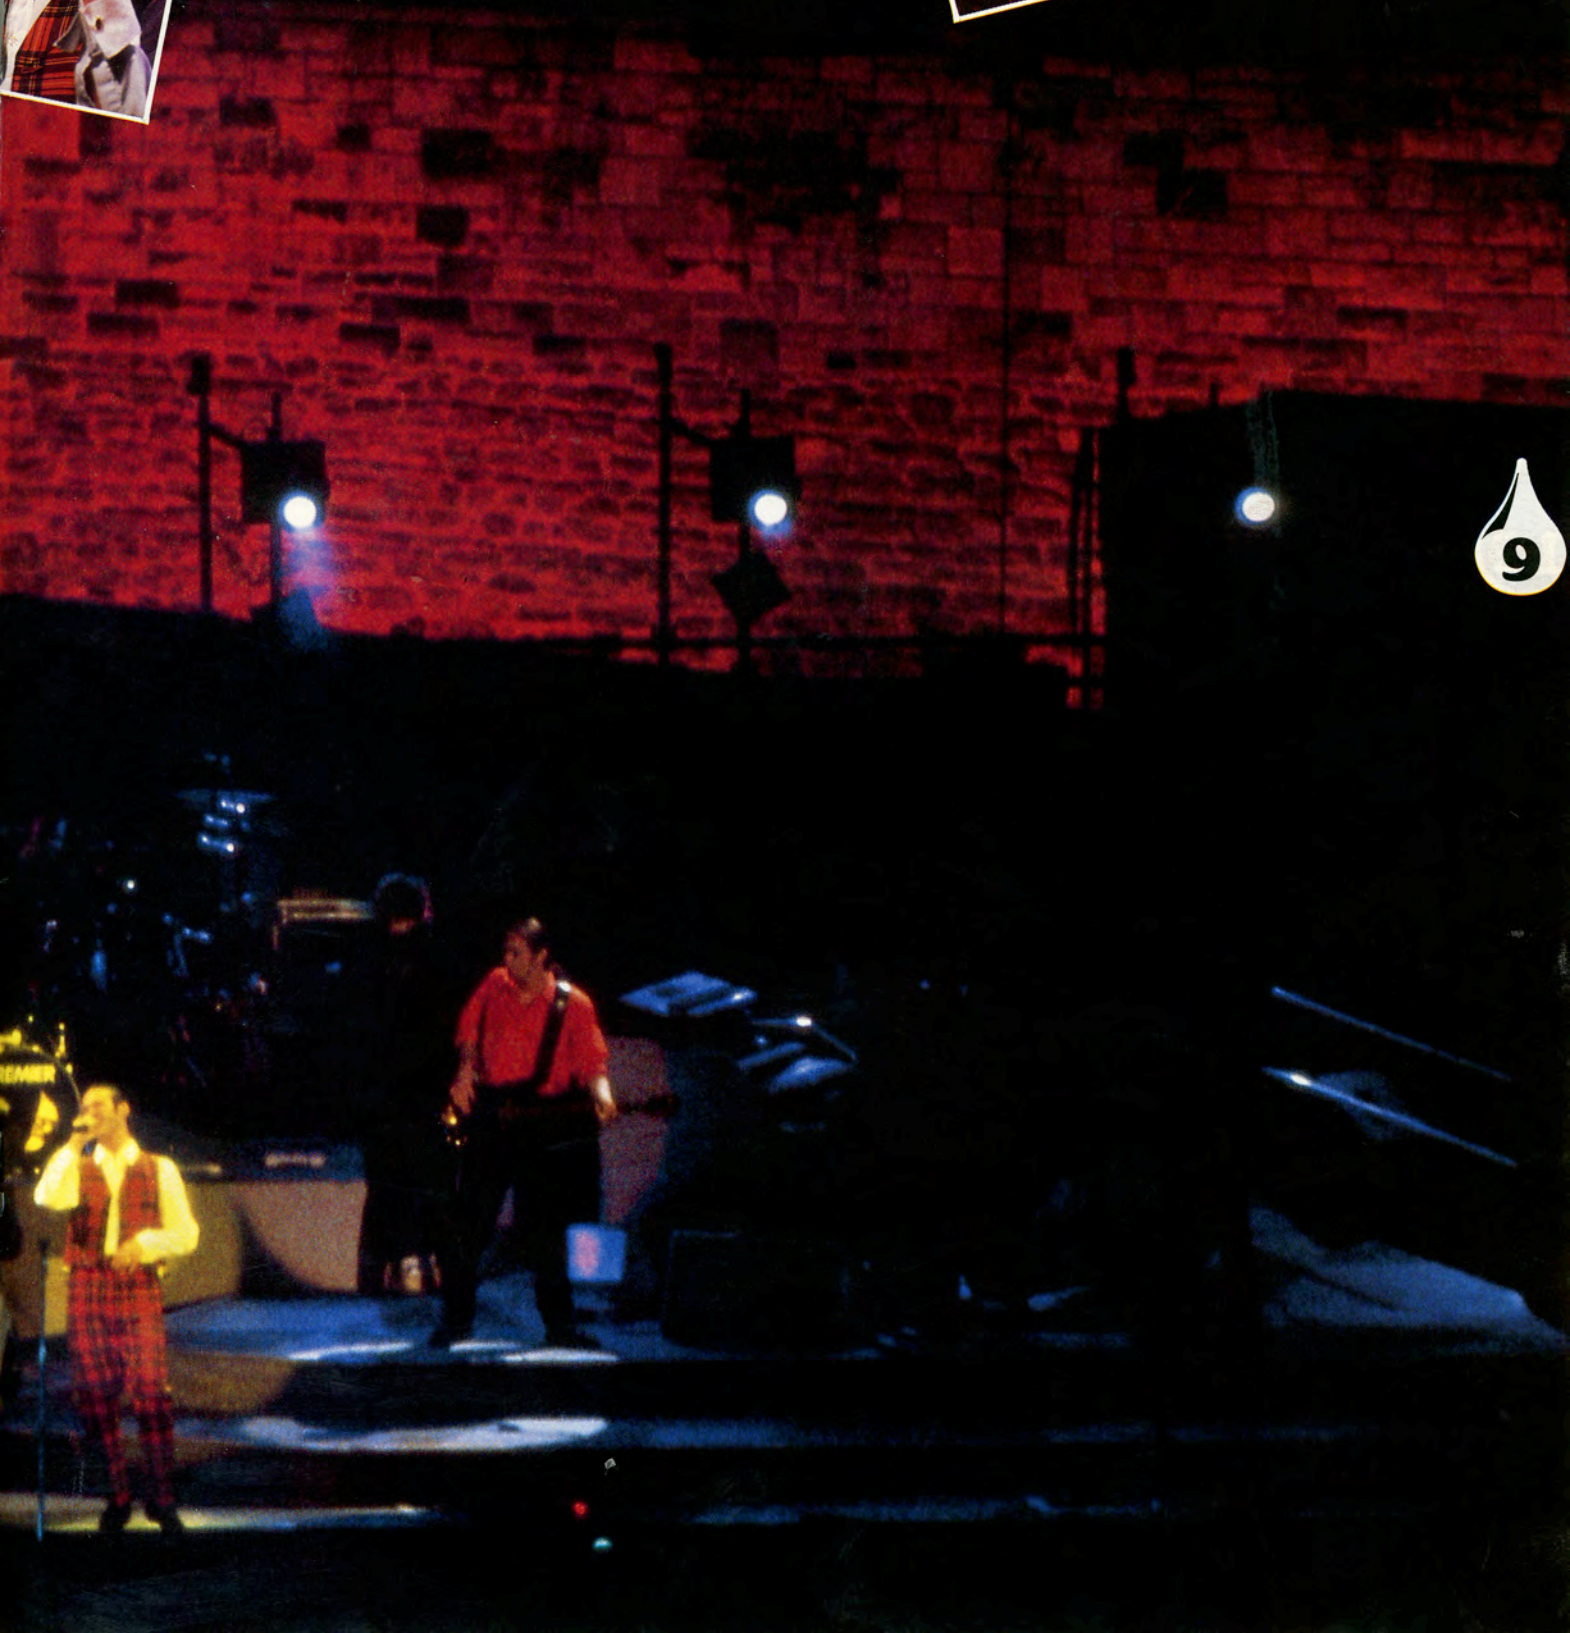

And it doesn't - until Tommy whacks down the final stroke on the drums, followed by huge applause from us-down-here.

As the intro to Goodnight Girl begins and the night darkens, the intensity of light, sound and natural stage management comes together to form a mind-shattering, climactic atmosphere.

Here's a lovely drawing of Marti wearing the famous red tartan suit at the Edinburgh Castle concert, sent in by Edward Richardson, aged 6.
